Merskey & Teasel: Problems with Insurance-Based Research on Chronic Pain, Med Clin North Am 91(2007):31–43.

In the above-referenced article, the authors make several statements regarding the Canadian Institute for the Relief of Pain and Disability (CIRPD), formerly called the Physical Medicine Research Foundation (PMRF). The authors' statement that this charity was founded by an industrial firm and two insurance companies is unsupported. The organization was established under the scientific leadership of the late Dr. John McM. Mennell in collaboration with Marc White. Its founding board members represented diverse professions and had no relationship to insurance companies at the time. The ideas and opinions expressed in Medical Clinics of North America do not necessarily reflect those of the Publisher. Information about CIRPD and its sponsorship policies can be found at <http://www.cirpd.org>.
