

Dedication

Jean M. Reeder, PhD, RN, CNOR

This issue is dedicated in memory of a beloved friend, colleague, and mentor: Jean M. Reeder, PhD, RN, CNOR. Dr. Reeder pioneered the ethical care of the perioperative patient by establishing the Association of periOperative Registered Nurses (AORN) special committee on ethics, which developed AORN's Explications for Perioperative Nursing. It is these explications that further articulate the ethical obligations of the perioperative nurse in the care of the surgical patient. Three of the authors in this issue (Jackie L. Berlandi, myself, and Patricia C. Seifert) were members of that original committee. We have all benefited through our relationships and work with Dr. Reeder. Because of her shared compassion and commitment to advancing the ethical care of the perioperative patient, we are able to continue her legacy by dedicating an entire issue of Perioperative Nursing Clinics to ethics. Dear Jean, we miss you and you live on in our hearts and efforts to advance perioperative nursing ethics.

Cecil A. King, MS, RN, CNOR
